Self-Advocacy Tips for Students

- Know your strengths and limits, and how they will or will not affect your life
- Be an active member of your ARD committee (“Nothing about me, without me.”)
- Set your own goals
- Recognize and celebrate your successes
- Realize that mistakes happen, and that is how we all learn and grow
- Know what accommodations and skills you need and how to access them
- Know your rights and what services are available to you
- Know how to ask for help
- Identify your support system
- Work to find solutions to overcome barriers to reaching your goals

Create the good life that you want for yourself!

Self-Advocacy Tips for Parents and Teachers

- Start early to let your child/student be as independent as possible.
- Present your child/student with options and choices.
- Let your child/student take risks and responsibilities, and experience natural consequences.
- Help your child/student be aware of who they are: his/her disability as well as ways to accommodate for him/herself, and his/her strengths, preference, interests and needs.
- Help your child/student seek a support system that will enable his/her success.

Remember to talk with your child/student and not at or for him/her
